

Vulnerability to Food Insecurity of Rural Households in Pakistan: An Empirical Evidence from Climate Change Impact
Survey

Research thesis submitted to
Graduate Institute of Development Studies (GIDS)
Lahore School of Economics

Defense of thesis submitted as partial fulfilment of the requirement of the degree of Master's in philosophy in Development Studies

By
Samar Quddus

Research Supervisor: Dr. Rashid Amjad

Co-Supervisor: Dr. Ahmed Nawaz

Acknowledgment

All praises to the Almighty God whose knowledge comprehend all things and only who is the One with full and perfect knowledge that He gives me strength and wisdom to make this thesis a reality.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to the Director Graduate Institute of Development Studies (GIDS) at LSE and my supervisor in this research, Dr. Rashid Amjad, for his continuous support and valuable guidance during all the time of research and writing of this thesis. His unwavering enthusiasm for the subject under study kept me engaged throughout the research and his personal generosity helped make me feel comfortable and relaxed at GIDS to complete my degree under his supervision. I would also like to extend my appreciation to my co-supervisor, Dr. Ahmad Nawaz, who expertly guided me in drawing methodology and econometrics to carry out my research. I could not have think of completing my research without the support and guidance of both.

My thanks and appreciation also go to the members of Committee for Advanced Studies & Research (CASR), LSE for the patient advice and comments on meeting with them.

Since data collection is one of the most imperative phases of any research and in this regard, I am deeply indebted to the faculty members of PIDE university, Islamabad, especially Dr. Fazal Hussain, Dr. Muhammad Iqbal and Mr. Ghulam Mustafa, for giving me their precious time and energy to help me and sharing data of Climate Change Impact Survey with me on which this study is based.

Last but not the least, I am profoundly grateful and obligated towards my family and friends, and my parents who believe in me and helped me surviving all these years and not letting me give up. Their love, care and endless support always make it easy for me to achieve my desired goal. I pray for their long healthy life to celebrate my success and happiness with them.